THINGS HEARD AND OVERHEARD.

Facts and Fancies Jotted Down in the Daily Notebook.

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year. When the festive chrysanthemum, and its shorn time-doth appear, Hung on the chappie's coat lapel, this flower of autumn size Is bigger than the time it cost; but not so in his eyes.

For other melancholy days and hours and times will come When his girl can't pass an oyster room and manage to keep "mum."

—A. Polly Natus.

It is said good may be discovered in everything if one will only look deep enough. The looking may become trying on the eyes.

It is easier to curtail your confidences than it is to increase your trust in your friends.

This is the delightful time of year when you find that the moths have been picknicking in your furs.

Gabrielle Rejane.

Mlle. Gabrielle Rejane, of whom one hears so much nowadays, is one of the few women who have triumphed over public prejudice against an actress with a plain face. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and the Baroness de Rothschild helped to make Rejane famous. This well born, well brought up Mlle. Rejane did not take her audiences by storm at her debut. In fact, she pegged away at her profession in most commonplace style after overcoming her mother's prejudice against it and after changing her name to Rejane to suit that prejudice. Mme. Bernhardt's violent quarrel with her in Genoa, simply because Danala admired her talent, sprang her into fame, and the Baroness Adolphe's kindness fixed her fortunes. From the business of amusing great folk by her clever monologues at the occasional matinee artique she has risen to almost the level of Bernhardt in Parisian estimation and commands a nice social position as well.

—Paris Letter.

She Is Progressing.

One of the great manufacturing of household furniture in Grand Rapids, Mich., employs a woman as chief designer of artistic furniture and pays her a handsome salary. She employs two or three girls as assistants. Another woman holds a similar position in the service of a great stove company in Detroit. The Studebaker carriage builders, in South Bend, Ind., employ a woman artist to do the delicate ornamental painting on the vehicles they make. A woman is steward and purser of a steamer running between Grand Haven and Chicago. There are several women who own and manage livery stables in western cities, and women farmers and women cattle ranchers are numerous in all western states. There are also many women engaged in fruit culture. One of the finest vineyards in Iowa is owned and managed by a young woman ex-schoolteacher. —Philadelphia Ledger.

Dodo on the Wheat.

Mrs. Asquith, Miss Margaret Tennant that was, and "Dodo" who still is, in spite of her disclaimers, has developed a craze for wheeling and is counted one of the best woman riders in England. Her chief rival is the beautiful Lady de Grey, the six foot widow of Lord Londale, who married some years ago the heir of a noble house and abandoned the rather rapid set to which she belonged. Lady de Grey's extreme height, combined with great beauty, has always made her conspicuous in the world she frequents, and now that she has become an accomplished bicycle rider people have plenty to say about her.

Bowling Clubs.

To belong to a bowling club where you get athletic exercise, together with a cup of tea, a little gossip and an opportunity to display a fetching gown, is the duty of every well regulated member of society. If you happen to live in a town where no bowling club exists, why not go to work to form one immediately? Bowling is essentially a cold weather sport. The task would not be herculean and probably a score or more of people, both ladies and gentlemen, would gladly join in the enterprise. —Exchange.

Women Bootblacks in Paris.

A New York woman recently in Paris confessed to a great interest in the woman bootblacks whom she saw there. "They wear a peculiar uniform," she says, "not unlike that of the Sisters of Mercy, but their coquettish manners quite nullify the religious association of their dress. Most of them work with gloved hands, and they are wonderfully neat and dexterous at their calling."

FOR THE YOUNG FOLK

PRETTY SUITS FOR COMFORT AND EASE OF MOVEMENT.

How to Dress the Little Boy and Little Girl—Suggestions For Those of Larger Growth—Goods For School Dress and Ordinary Wear.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Comfort and ease in movement are the first considerations in children's clothes in these days, and beauty and magnificence may come later, with all their train of miseries. The round little legs are incased in close woolen drawers and thick stockings, and leggings buttoned outside of them for cold days. A double flannel waist, with long sleeves, cover the active body, and to this the drawers are fastened, as are the side elastics, which fasten to the stockings, holding them firmly without hindering the legs and hugging the foundations for future disease. Then, if the child is a girl, there is a cotton waist holding the warm little flannel petticoat and dainty embroidered "panties." If a boy, there is a pair of cloth trousers as big as your two hands, and a tiny kilt skirt over them, and a warm blouse. The small girl wears a cozy frock, sometimes long and sometimes short, but always made as daintily as mother hands can achieve.

The boy, from the time he can toddle until he is 4 years old, has for his outer coat a sort of Russian blouse of dark brown, green or blue velveta, gathered in at the waist with a thick cord in a lighter shade of blue or other color, or sometimes white. The sleeves are loose at the arms, but snugged in at the wrists with a warm band. The boy's coat may also be known by the double row of silver buttons down the left side. There is a collar entirely of lace or of the material bordered with lace. With this he wears his leggings and a comical little Liberty cap of velveta with a border of trimmer and a tassel down one side. The name of this style of cap is best. There is one other kind of cap suitable for very small boys, and one only, a sort of a "trachea," made of cloth generally to correspond in color with the coat, and often made of the same material and trimmed with a band of beaver.

For the little girl, the very small one, up to about 4 years old, there is a short coat of krummer wool, mixed white and gray, which reaches a little below the knees. She, too, has warm little leggings, but most often limited ones. The coat is thick and lined warmly. The waist fits the body closely and is quite plain and buttons down the center. The skirt is sewed on and slightly full, and there is a ribbon belt, generally black, and often a knot with ends at the neck under the turndown collar, and there should be sprung bretelles. With this outfit the little cherub may wear a close, warm hood of the krummer wool or of silk or velvet, or she may have a big white felt hat with nodding plumes. She will be sweet enough to eat in any of them.

A few mothers put very long coats on the little tots, but they always prefer the short ones when allowed a preference, for the small child does not yet properly value the picturesque.

For a girl of 10 to 12 there is a comfortable and pretty coat made empire style, with a quaint shoulder cape falling into points in front, on the shoulders and in the back. The material used in one was covert suiting in mixed drab. The trimming consisted of twisted brown silk and gold cord. There was a black felt mandarin hat, trimmed with two upright plumes and a band end bows of maize satin ribbon.

Frocks for girls of that age and thereabouts are generally plain, or with very little ornamentation, and few, even of the very wealthiest families, dress their children expensively now. Plain dark wool for every day, with neat and fanciful pinafores of light materials, are seen everywhere. The pinafores are of swiss, diaper linen, lawn and nainsook, with lace and ribbon trimmings.

Plaids in clan pattern are very popular for school and ordinary wear. For parties and special occasions blue, pink, cream or red fayetta is a favorite, as it is strong and extremely pretty in those shades and lights up well with ribbon and lace. Light silks, crepons and Japanese creps are also made for dress occasions.

TAKING HER AT HER WORD.

She—No! Mr. Harding, it can never be. But I will always be a sister— He (rising)—Oh, that's the deal, is it? Well, then, sister, if you've got your thimble handy, I wish you would sew up the knees of my trousers that I have sacrificed in finding out our relationship.

Women Policemen.

Considerable comment has been created here by the action of the school board recommending that all the janitors of school buildings be given police powers. As a large proportion of those who perform this duty are women, this will be one of the first instances on record of women becoming policemen. It is proposed to have them appointed by the mayor under an act of assembly relating to special and private policemen, so as to better enable them to preserve order around the buildings and protect the school property.—Reading (Pa.) Dispatch.

Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard.

Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, says a New York writer, has never wholly recovered from the sudden death of her husband two years since. Social life she has almost altogether relinquished, and even her philanthropic work, in which she was always so active and energetic a laborer, has, much of it, had to be abandoned. This condition of Mrs. Shepard causes regret and sympathy not only among the many individuals whom she has befriended, but among numerous organizations and ladies who have relied upon her for both inspiration and support.

She Can French.

Miss Lenore Ayres, the business manager of the Indianapolis Organizer, has been called upon several times of late to fill the pulpit in place of absent pastors. Recently she preached at Haightville in the morning and gave a missionary address in the evening at University place. Both services were very interesting, and she was invited to come again.

A New Hat Guard.

Women have been waiting for something which would hold their hats on in lieu of the spiking pin. This seems to have arrived in a little English invention, which is an ingenious arrangement of two curved pins that, sewed in to the back of the hat, grip the hair in a way that defies any wind to loosen.
